Hyderabad: Finance minister Etela Rajender on Tuesday said that the 1.12 lakh posts that chief minister K Chandrababhu Naidu promised to fill up in the government sector will be done before the TRS government completes its five-year term in office. These jobs will cost the state exchequer an additional financial burden of Rs 3,000 crore per year.

Responding to issues raised by BJP, Congress, TDP, MIM and CPM members during a short discussion on 'filling up of government vacant posts and unemployment issue' in the Assembly, Rajender said that despite an adverse impact on the employment opportunities due to demonetisation and GST policies, the TRS government will fill up all vacancies in the government sector.

is expecting that its efficient industrial policy that has resulted in 16,000 institutions either having set up or in the process of being set up in the state will generate 2 lakh job opportunities in the private sector.

Charging the opposition parties with supporting people who had gone to the court filing 272 cases regarding most of the 73 job notifications issued by the TSPSC and stalling the recruitment process, the finance minister said that of the total 4.41 lakh government jobs in the state, the recruitment process for 63,152 jobs is on, of which 27,744 had already been filled up.

Harish Rao said that the opposition parties were trying to blame the ruling TRS government with an eye on the vote bank. "The BJP leaders should first find out whether Prime Minister Narendra Modi has been able to provide one crore jobs per year. The TRS government has made more number of recruitments in just three-and-a-half-years compared to what the earlier Congress government did in its 10-year rule in undivided AP," he said.
